Gold Rush

On the morning of 24th January 1848, James W. Marshall informed his employer, John Augustus Sutter, that gold had indeed been found on his property - a sawmill under construction on the American River in California.

As was inevitable, the discovery leaked despite precautions to the contrary, and eventually caused what was perhaps the greatest short-term migration of people in documented history - the California Gold Rush.

Sceptics abounded, but news spread like wild fire and within weeks most able-bodied men in the surrounding areas were off 'prospecting'. By midsummer it seemed as though all the men in California had disappeared into the hills.

From the onset of the Gold Rush in California in the late 1840s to the "closing" of the frontier four decades later, saloons like this were the salvation to many a thirsty, lonely prospector, cowboy or tracklayer in search of drink and companionship throughout the West.
